The Warning from Havti.

(From the Journal of Commerce.) In the republic of Hayti we see what a black man's government can do with everything in its favor-congenial climate, abundant natural resources, recognition by every civilized nation, freedom from foreign molestation. All that a negro government is capable of achieving, we may fairly say, the Haytien Republic has accomplished. There have been passages in the history of Hayti highly creditable to the colored race.— The overthrow of the farcical Soulouque displayed a love of freedom, a consciousness of the capacity for self-government, which are not found among people wholly ignorant and besotted. Presi-dent Geffrard was not a bad executive at first. He showed considerable talent in quieting the unruly elements of the Republic, put the finances on an improved footing, and was for some years a popular ruler. It was through money entanglements that he, like many another man, fell. Being hard up for cash, and unable to effect a loan, he took charge of the Port au Prince custom house, and personally collected the dues. This gave rise to great scandal, and was seized upon by the opposition party to justify an armed revolution. The fickle, excitable blacks joined the standard of revolt, some of them seemingly for no other purpose than to gratify their love of bloodshed and rapine. Geffrard had the sagacity to resign, and so saved his life. He and his wife, children and grandchildren, were by decree perpetually banished from Hayti; as were also his principal ministers. Others of his supporters had ten years of exile served out to them. General Salnave was then chosen President for the term of four years, and a new constitution was adopted, which resembles in many respects our own national charter. In parts it is decidedly at variance with the doctrine of universal suffrage, and of free speech, which the freedmen of the South and their Radical friends insist upon as the inalienable rights of human beings-that is of black human beings; the Southern whites being entitled to those rights only on certain conditions. For example, under the Hayti constitution only those male citizens can vote who are landed proprietors, or have been engaged in the cultivation of a farm for not ess than five years, or exercise a profession, or are in the public service, or tollow some industrial pursuit. This is not universal suffrage, but a genuine im-provement on it; and the Haytiens so far exhibited good sense. Another clause of the constitution prohibits the assembling of people in public places without leave from the police authorities. This smacks of despotism, and is a confession that the Haytiens distrusted kicked out of the country. . We wish to judge Hayti justly. It is not because she is cursed with a civli war that we pronounce the black re-public a failure, and a disgrace to civilization. We have had our own civil war, lasting longer than that of Hayti, and marked by many occurrences which both sides would be glad to have blotted from history. But still it was a war, prosecuted in the main, according to the usages of civilized nations, and considering the vast number of troops engaged and the extent of territory traversed, was as free from horrible excesses as any other war of the same magnitude on record. The Haytien conflict is no war, such as white men wage with each other. It is only murder and pillage on the It is only murder and pillage on the large scale. Salnave is said to have given his soldiers permission to kill and rob at pleasure. The troops of their power to govern themselves. Their premonitions were correct. After a few months of misrule, Salnave made himself as generally hated as either Soulouque or Geffirard had been. Towards the close of 1867 a revolution broke out, which has lasted with varying fortunes up to the present time, when it appears to be on the eve of triumph, if that can be called a triumph which consists in deposing one tyrant in order to put another in his place, who in turn will soon be dragged down and killed, or the opposition do the same thing, with or without orders. Prisoners in civil life are shot without trial. Women are violated, houses are burned, provisions are wantonly destroyed by the infuriated soldiery. Salnave and the rebel leaders alike live upon the country. Merchants who are not despoiled of their goods, under pretence that they are enemies, are just as truly wronged by being obliged to accept worthless government shinplasters or receipts. Salnave keeps two printing presses at work getting out money for him at the rate of $200,000 a day, and when he condescends to pay at all, puts off his victims with such trash as that. We do not hear whether Gen- SUMMER DRESS GOODS eralissimo John Lynch, the head man on the other side, keeps his printing presses too, or despising all filmsy pretences of payment, takes whatever he can clutch. This General Lynch, by the way, is very strong in his protesta-tions against selling Haytien territory to the United States. So is one Gen-eral Hector, his trusted lieutenant. A telling point which they make in proclamations against Salnave is that he wants to sell a slice of Hayti to this govern ment, and pocket the purchase money. It is a little curious that at this particular time; when all the American slaves are freed and clothed with the suffrage, the negroes of Hayti should be bitterly hostile to becoming annexed to the United States, or parting with an inch of their land to us. Is this an evidence of the distrust or want of fellow feeling which exists between negroes of differ-ent regions, or of the disgust which the Haytiens feel after their wretched experience, for anything bearing the name of a republic! Every government, big or little, has its mission. The black government of Hayti seems to answer the end of its existence by warning this republic of the danger of extending the privilege of the ballot to great masses of the blacks without reference to any preliminary qualifications whatever.

Dr. J. Lawrence: Dear Sir—My youngest daughter, aged five years, has been dreadfully afficted with Scrofula nearly all her life. I tried a great many physicians, but without relieving her much; in fact, most of them said there was no hope of cure. During the lasts pring she was worse than ever; her body and limbs being covered with scres and blotches—with face and eyes badly ulce ated and swollen. While in this condition I was advised by Dr. L. A. Stith to try your Rosadais. I at once procured three hottles, and commenced giving it to her. The effect was magical.
